TALENTED Glenmorgan artist Carol McCormack is passionate about supporting her fellow rural Queenslanders, especially when it comes to health and wellbeing.

When Ms McCormack found out how Cancer Council Queensland was helping cancer sufferers through the construction of the Olive McMahan Lodge in Toowoomba, she was determined to do whatever she could to contribute to the facility.

Ms McCormack said she decided to donate a 55m long frieze after touring the facility last year.

"I really wanted to brighten up one of the corridors and so I've made the frieze a river theme with birds, fishermen, bridges and trees, something that country people can relate to," she said.
